Negroes Gain Ground on Employment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department says Negroes gained substantial ground in employment the past 10 years, but stand to lose most of it by 1975 unless they win a bigger share of white collar and skilled jobs.

Employment of Negroes and other nonwhites increased from 6.4 million to 7.7 million since 1955 — a much faster rate of growth than for white workers, saidna report in the Monthly Labor Review.

This brought the ratio of nonwhite workers to total employment from 10.2 per cent in 1955 to 10.7 per cent in 1965, it said.

"Nevertheless, nonwhite workers continue to be disproportionate concentrated in less skilled blue-collar and service occupations," said the report by Joe L. Russell of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

f nonwhites continue to hold the same proportion of jobs, their ratio of total employment will slip back to 10.3 per cent by 1975, the report said, and their unemployment rate could be doubled because of the growing population.

Despite the 10-year growth in jobs, unemployment for nonwhites averaged at least twice the rat efor white workers and will be reduced in the future only if government and private job training programs and new laws against employment discrimination have a major impact, Russell said.

The low skilled occupations in which Negroes and other nonwhite workers are now largely concentrated are expected to grow more slowly than other jobs, Russell said.

More than half the 1.3 million gain in non white employment the past 10 years was in white collar jobs but still, less than one-fifth of all employed nonwhites held such jobs compared with nearly one-half of all employed white workers.

Nonwhites have made the most headway in teaching jobs, where they now about equal the number of white teachers in elementary and secondary schools, the report said.

Another area of significant gains for nonwhites was in clerical jobs, such as postal clerks, telephone operators, stock clerks, office machine operators and cashiers, the report said. The nonwhite ratio in clerical employment rose from 3.8 per cent to 5.7 per cent over the 10 years.

Employment of nonwhite craftsmen, much of it in construction work, increased from 4 per cent to 5.6 per cent over the 10 years, the report said.

Can Share Hiring of Students Cost

LITTLE ROCK (AP)— State and local government agencies can contribute funds as their share of hiring students under the College Work-Study Program, Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett said Thursday.

Bennett said the agencies could contribute the funds, $77 for each student employed, to the state Office of Economic Opportunity.

Under the program, 2,160 students at 17 Arkansas colleges and universities will work for 10 weeks at $1.25 an hour for governmental agencies or local non-profit groups.

The Empire State building has a maximum sway of 2.97 inches, recorded in 1936.

Rain Needed by Wheat Farmers

By BARNEY W. PEYSER

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Wheat farmers need rain, and need it soon to ward off a short crop. The harvest, already underway in Texas and Oklahoma, is due to reach Kansas soon.

Drought and late freezes have played havoc through most of the wheat growing areas of the Great Plains.

Early forecasts of a bumper crop are being sharply revised downward. Central and western Kansas, southeastern Colorado, eastern New Mexico, Nebraska and the eastern area of Washington are the hardest hit.

The effects of the dry weather have been felt in the Oklahoma and Texas panhandles, but not as much as in the other areas.

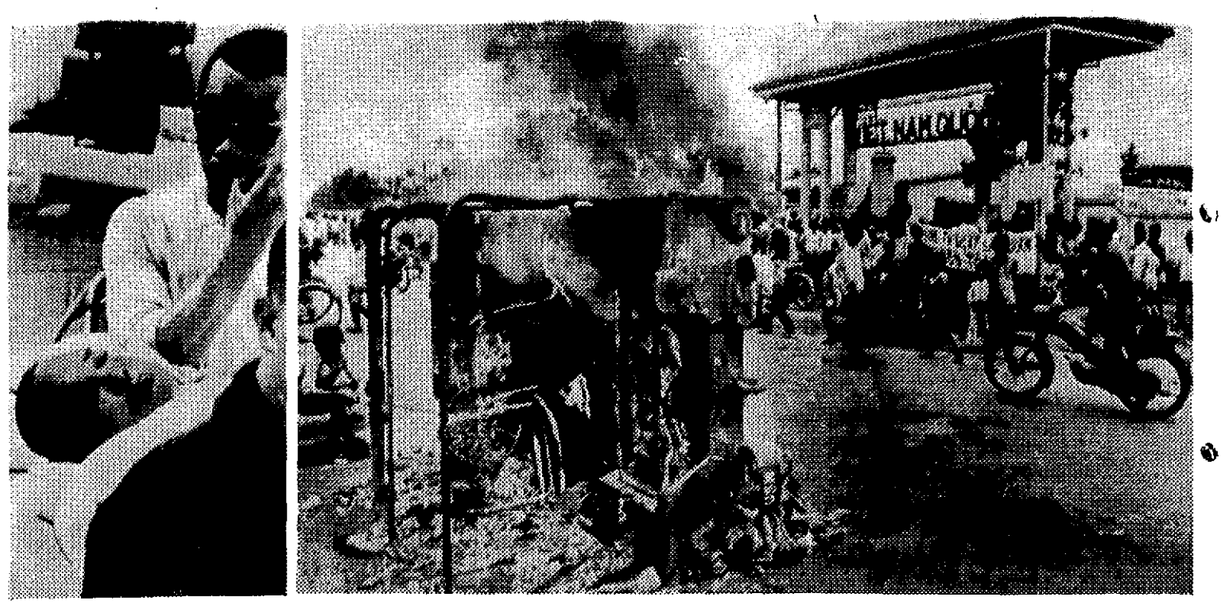

Wheat fields in some areas of western Kansas are spotted with stunted plants. The wheat, weakened by drought and freezing, was vulnerable to additional damage from cutworms, green bugs and mites.

But one farm expert sees a ray of hope — if rain comes.

"Wheat is a remarkable crop," said Andrew B. Erhart, superintendent of the Garden City, Kan., branch of Kansas State University's Agricultural Experiment Station. "It can recover from what appears to be total damage to something less than total."

In explaining recovery of some freeze-damaged wheat, Erhart said late heads have emerged in some fields.

"Later wheat could still profit from rain if it arrives," he said.

VIOLENCE AND PEACE TALKS—A U.S. Navy jeep burns in a Saigon street, right, after anti-American rampage touched off by hand-grenade wounding of Buddhist youth leader Thich Thien Minh, pictured left in hospital emergency room. Outbreak preceded tentative truce between South Viet Nam's military government and Buddhist leaders.

He called this season "one of the drier years of record, but not the driest."

The hope blossomed a bit Wednesday night when the first substantial rain in weeks fell over central Kansas. Several points reported three-quarters of an inch or more, and a few places had up to two inches.

The rain, however, was not extensive enough to break the drought.

Freezes in late April and in May hurt the crop. On May 12 the temperature dipped to 22 degrees in some southwestern Kansas areas.

COMING YOUR WAY SOON!

The biggest forward step in telephone communications since the invention of the dial system will soon be taken in Hope and Bodcaw.

We're speaking of one of the modern miracles of communication — Direct Distance Dialing — which will be available to all telephone users in Hope and Bodcaw beginning June 26 . . . less than a month from now.

Direct Distance Dialing (we call it DDD) is the result of years of research and development by telephone scientists and engineers, and it makes dialing the telephone of a friend or relative across the state or across the nation almost like calling next door.

When DDD starts here, telephone users will be able to dial their own station-to-station long distance calls to any one of about 95 million telephones in cities throughout the United States.

Skilled telephone technicians are now testing the intricate equipment which will make DDD possible in Hope and Bodcaw on June 26.

We know you'll like DDD. With Direct Distance Dialing, you'll be only a few seconds away from your loved ones — no matter where they live in this nation — and your long distance calls will speed through faster than ever before.

Clergymen Go to Bars for Questions

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) —Clergymen of five faiths, their backs against a cocktail bar, answered questions fired at them from the 20 young men and women in the crowded party room.

"How can I know that God exists?" asked a pink-cheeked man in a blue blazer.

"How do you find God—how do you make contact?" asked a coiffured redhead in suit and gloves.

"What about the 'God is dead' theory?" asked a blonde in a blue dress and pearl necklace.

To the clergymen the questions were not as important as the fact they were being asked here, in the window-walled recreation room overlooking the swimming pool of a 144 - unit apartment building.

They are working tobether trying to find a means of maintaining religious values among the young adults for whom the modern apartment complex, with its bar and pool and sense of unrelenting, competitive gaiety, has become a way of life.

Panelists were the Rev. James Cashman of Holy Trinity Catholic Church, The Rev. Doug McLean of First Methodist, The Rev. Ed Courson of First Presbyterian, the Rev. William Bearden of Bethany Presbyterian, the Rev. J.R. Marconoel, a Baptist and director of student religious activity at Baylor University Medical Center, and the Rev. Robert Hobus.

The Rev. Mr. Hobus is in charge of the Apartment Ministry of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod.

He brought chuckles when he ceremoniously elected himself, "hearing no other motions, to the office o temporary pope of these proceedings," empowered to cut short his colleagues if they spoke too long.

The affair was advertised by post-card invitations and by this mimeographed message posted on mil slots: "Fact-finding forum for folks like you—Toll House rec room — ask you questions.Share your views."

The give-and-take talk of God and church lasted for two hours in the balloon-decorated room.

Less than half the audience resided in the apartment. Others come from other apartments because they had been notified earlier by the Rev. Mr. Hobus and his colleagues.

Each was asked to fill out a mimeographed form stating they'd like further contact with religious preferences. They were asked to indicate whether any of the clergymen.

Bob Thomas at the Movies

ROME (AP) — A funny thing happened on my way to Rome's Leonardo da Vinci airport.

I stopped to visit a place called Birreria del West. The translation is Beerhall of the West, and that is precisely what has been transplanted to a Roman suburb. It is a long bar, complete with swinging doors, all done in the Western motif.

Birreria del West is evidence of Italy's passion for things western. Indeed the American West seems to have captured the public fancy throughout the Common Market countries, the traveler sees urchins playing cowboys and Indians throughout Europe.

The Western movie has always been popular in Europe, where city-bound film goers have enjoyed the Westerns' vast scenery as well as the elemental, easily-translated action. Now more horse operas are being filmed in Europe than in Hollywood.

The trend started three years ago, prindipally in Yougoslavia and Spain, where horses and scenery were readily available. Now the films are being made plentifully in France, Germany, and especially here in Italy.

European Westerns have proved a bonanaza to American actors schooled in the ways of the West. Among those who have been shooting it out with the bad hombres: Audie Murphy, Broderick Crawford, Guy Madison, Cameron Mitchell, Jeffrey Hunter Dan Duryea Lex Barker.

Even Britisher Stewart Granger, who made some Westerns at MGM, has shared in the cycle; his latest film is titled "Old Surehand."

"They're making nothing over here but Westerns and spy movies," Granger sighed when I met him on the Via Veneto.

Biggest of the Western stars here is Clint Eastwood, late of the "Rawhide" TV series. His "For a Fistful of Dollars" was one of the biggest moneymakers in recent history; United Aritsts recently paid $900,000 for an American release. Clint now earns $250,000 per film.

NEW YORK (AP) — "Guilty or Not Guilty," the suspense tale on ednesday night's NBC Bob Hope Theatre was one of those increasingly rare programs — a first broadcast, not a re-run.

But it was something more, too, apparently. It looked like a program made to demonstrate an idea for a series. The storyline itself was nothing more than a twist on a rather familiar TV theme. It centered on an apartment house mugging and a fiery tenant who was so impatient with the normal process of investigation and trial that he organized a band of vigilantes.

how can a viewer spot a pilot film when it is masquerading as a one-shot dramatic show? Simply by watching the way the principal characters are introduced and developed.

The key figures Wednesday night were Robert Ryan, playing a chief assistant district attorney in New York, and Richard Beymernas his young assistant. This matching of the mature and the young is standard casting for cops-and-robbers and courtroom series.

E.G. Marshall in "The Defenders," the senior member of the law firm, had Robert Reed playing his young son and partner. Efrem Zimbalist Jr. in "The FBI" is the senior G-man, with Richard Brooks as his young assistant.

It was made obvious at the beginning of "Guilty or Not Guilty" that Ryan's character was a widower with teen-age children, quite irrelevant to the plot, but obviously a suggestion that there was story material in this set-up.

An even more significant clue about a series-to-come came when the show took several minutes out of the action to introduce the widower's steady girl, played by Pippa Scott. Miss Scott is an excellent actress and normally would not be wasted on a couple of unimportant scenes in which her most important job was to hand the hero a drink when he returned tired from a murder case. Obviously, if the show ever finds a network niche, Miss Scott will have more interesting things to do. After all, there was Barbara Hale's secretary part in "Perry Mason" and Joann Barnes' role of the ex-wife in "The Trials of O'Brien."

A series, vaguely along the lines suggested by Wednesday night's show, was tried out briefly last year when CBS put on "For the Prosecution," with William Shatner playing a young assistant district attorney. That one had some of the feel of "The Defenders," however. Wednesday night's show looked like a slick, uninspired product off the Hollywood assembly line — in spite of the New York location shots.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

The Gulf Between
Dear HELEN: My daughter my first marriage is 21 and she thinks she is the boss. She won't go to work. She stays out all night, almost, sleeps all morning. She is forever in the bathroom when we want it. She will not pick up or help clean. She thinks she is it. She takes all the money we give her, yet she hates us. When I tell her I don't want her sloppiness and all her friends over here any more she gets so mad you can hear her a block away.

I raised her since she was 4 when her father walked out on us. This is the thnaks I get. she is all for herself. What can I do? — Mrs. X.

Dear Mrs. X.: As long as you give your daughter money and put up with her laziness, she will have litle incentive to change. Without intensive counseling I coubt you can do much about mending a rift that started years ago, so you'd better give her a time limit on getting a job, an apartment and out from underfoot. She is an adult and should act like one. — H.

Der Helen: I was interested in the letter from the girl who wanted help because she and her fiance didn't want to have an affair before mrriage but couldn't help getting "carried away."

My husband and I had the same problem (doesn't everybody:) when we were engaged. We managed it by talking about it, encouraging each other not to take chnces, avoiding dangerous situations as much as possible and, of course, praying for strength. I hope they can too

I was also encouraged by her letter because all I hear and read these days about the moral of our young people. Was so happy to know there are still some who keep their standards high. Was beginning to think there weren't any left. I just hope she's right about there being millions of others like her and that those surveys and studies are mostly exaggerated. — Mrs. J. S.

Dear Mrs. J. S.: You'd better belivee those studies are exaggerated! For every survey (made among a very limited number of students) I can produce a thousand letters showing that the average young person has, if anything, higher values than the adults who condemn him.

Tody's youth has less moral guidance than any generation before him, but they have firmer ideas because they're based on reasoning things out, not on blind obedience to rules. — H.

Dear Helen: I must be "The listening kind" because in every community that we move to there is always some person who monopolizes my time. In one place a woman came over three and four times a day and talked, talked, talked. Mostly about other neighbors I've learned to my sorrow these people aren't true friends. But if I show I'm bored they circulate it that the new woman on the block is rude and arrogant — when the truth would be near to weary and exasperated. How can I avoid them without getting their ill will — Weary and Easperated

Dear W. and E.: Ask your other neighoors, who no doubt had the same trouble until they got tough. The "block gossip" picks on newcomers because they are the only ones who will put up with her. This type hardly ever learns that too much hot air causes cold shoulders. — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're havingkid trouble or just plain trouble let Helen help YOU.

Both Pro Grid Leagues Are Worried

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a players' market in pro football.

Bud Adams, owner of the Houston Oilers of the American Football League, says at least 100 National Football League veterans have contacted AFL teams.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozell says both leagues are concerned about lame duck players. AFL Commissioner Al Davis is strangely silent.

The big fuss started May 17 when the New York Giants announced they had signed Pete Gogolak, the soccer-style placekicker who played out his option with Buffalo and the AFL.

Two NFL strongmen, George Halas, owner-coach of the Chicago Bears, and Vince Lombardi, coach-general manager of the Greey Bay Packers, have said they didn't like the idea.

"I think good judgment was not used," said Halas.

"I did not like it and many others did not like it either," said Lombardi.

Several of the 15 NFL coaches who finished a two-day meeting Thursday, deplored the contract war.

"They're going to kill the game if they start flirting with one another's players," said George Allen, new coach of the NFL's Los Angeles Rams. "There are enough good football players to go around for both leagues."

Under pro football rules, when a player signs he is bound to a club for two seasons — the second year on option. He can play out his option. He then becomes a free agent the following May 1 and is free to dicker. Gogolak did that at Buffalo, and many players are expected to do it this year unless the war ends.

A settlement of some type may be in the wind. One NFL owner, who refused to let his name be used, said there might be interesting developments before the teams report to training camp in July.

First and Third

KANSAS CITY — (NEA) — The Big Eight Conference has the nation's winningest active football coach in Nebraska's Bob Devaney.

Devaney has a nine-year record of 73-16-5. Missouri's Dan Devine ranks third with an 84-24-7 record in 11 years.

Braves Give Up Four Runs on Little Single

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sure Atlanta believes in Southern hospitality.

But giving up four runs on a single . . .!

That's what happened to Bobby Bragan's charitable Braves Thursday night when San Francisco handed Atlanta its sixth straight setback, 5-0.

Outfielder Felipe Alou was the goat on Cap Peterson's sixth inning single that broke open a 1-0 game. The bases were loaded on two infield hits and an intentional walk to Willie Mays when Peterson came to bat.

He laced a single to left and when the ball bounced past Alou and rolled to the fence, all four runners scored.

That gave Bob Bolin a comfortable margin and the Giants' right-hander made it stand up. He allowed only one single over the final seven innings and finished with a three-hitter for his fourth vicotry in seven decisions.

The victory was one fifth straight for the National League-leading Giants, who still hold a 2½-game margin over surging Los Angeles. The Dodgers won their ninth game in the last 10 by shutting out St. Louis for the second straight night, 2-0.

Houston tagged reliever Jack Baldschun for nine hits and scored eight runs in the 12th inning to beat Cincinnati 11-4. Philadelphia edged Chicago 5-4 and Pittsburgh blanked New York 5-0.

In the American League, Washington battered Boston 12-2, New York downed Chicago 5-3, Detroit nipped Minnesota 7-6, Baltimore defeated California 9-6 in 10 innings and Kansas City whipped Cleveland 1-4.

Don Sutton and Ron Perranoski combined for Los Angeles' second straight shutout. Sutton, the rookie right-hander, raised his record to 7-4 with Perranoski relieving in the seventh.

Wes Parker singled home the first Doge rrun in the fifth and then Al Ferrara's pinch single in the seventh brought home the other.

BAT MAN— Matty Alou of the Pittsburgh Pirates is particular about the bats he uses, but apparently it makes little difference which pitcher he uses them against. Alou is among the leading hitters in the National League.

Thinks Buffle Best Choice on Saturday

NEW YORK (AP) — If you believe that experience is paramount in a horse race, go no further than Buffle in looking for the probable winner of Saturday's $125,000-added Belmont Stakes at Aqueduct.

Although not heavily campaigned, the home-bred son of Zenith out of a Bold Venture mare, Refurbish, is supported heavily by a cast wise in the ways of the 1½-mile race, which winds up the Triple Crown competition for 3-year-olds.

Post time Saturday is 5:15 p.m., E D T, with television (CBS) slated for 5-5:30 p.m.

Buffle is owned by Robert Kleberg's King Ranch, which has won three runnings of the Belmont in 11 tries — with Triple Crown winner Assault in 1946, Middleground in 1950 and High Gun in 1954. He is trained by 85-year-old Max Hirsch, who has saddled four winners — the King Ranch trio and Vitoway back in 1928. And he'll be ridden by Manuel Ycaza, who has tried four times and won once—with Quadrangle two years ago.

BALTIMORE — Johnny Gilend, 151, Baltimore, outpointed Cahrley Scott, 155, Philadelphia, 10.

LOS ANGELES — Irish Crawford, 127, North Hollywood Calif., knocked out Raul Carreon, 126, Sonora, Mexico, 3.

BOISE, Idaho — Boone Kirkman, 200, Seattle, nWash., stopped John Collins, 245, Boise, 4.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Johnny Brooks, 148, Henderson, Nev., and Joe Clark, 148, Las Vegas, drew, 10.

PORTLAND, Maine — Pete Riccitelli, 170, Portland, knocked out Jimmy McDermott, 166, Holyoke, Mass., 4.

Looking Ahead

ATLANTA — (NEA) — Georgia Tech's football coach Bobby Dodd has an interesting theory about spring football practice:

"You never know in the spring," Dodd said, "how good your football team is going to be in the fall—not really."

At least he's honest.

CHERCHEZ LA FEMME—Such grace. Such class. Such form. Such boldness. Not only that, but Francoise Durr of France plays tennis pretty well, too.

Radatz Still Works Magic for Indians

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dick Radatz now is doing his latest act for the Cleveland Indians — and it still works like magic.

First he appears. Then he disappears.

Radatz did both in the seventh inning Thursday night just hours after the Indians acquired him from Boston. He faced eight batters, retired one, watched five cross the plate and left with the Indians well on their way to a 1-4 loss to Kansas City.

Earlier in the day, Radatz had been frank in expressing his pleasure with the trade that sent him from the struggling Red Sox to the American League leading Indians in exchange for pitchers Lee Stange and Don McMahon.

"It's like starting life all over again — being born again," said Radatz. "There's nothing wrong with my arm. My trouble is mechanical and if I pitch the way I think I can, the Indians will win the pennant."

The way Radatz thinks he can pitch is the way he pitched from 1962 to 1964 when he was dubbed the Monster and twice won the Fireman of the Year award as baseball's No. 1 relief pitcher. The way he pitched against the A's is the way he's pitched the last two years while breaking in his disappearing act.

The Kansas City victory, coupled with Boston's 12-2 loss to Washington, tumbled the Red Sox into the AL cellar while the Detroit edged Minnesota 7-6 and A's climbed into ninth place.

In Form

KNOXVILLE — (NEA) — Richmond Flowers Jr., one of the bright surprises of the indoor track season, also had a fine spring football season at the University of Tennessee.

Flowers, who will be a sophomore in the fall, is listed as the starting wingback after spring drills.

He also has become one of the United States' best hurdlers, ranking right behind world record holder Willie Davenport.

En-Lightened

ATLANTA — (NEA) — When infielder Woody Woodward signed with the Braves he was a junior at Florida State University.

Appreciative of the opportunities he had at Florida State, he donated $3,000 of his bonus to the university for the installation of lights on its baseball field.

Woodward comes from a talented family. Actress Joanne Woodward is a first cousin.

Hill Was Third Choice

Graham Hill, winner of the Indianapolis "500," was the third choice driver for John Mecom, owner of the American Red Ball Special. Mecom originally wanted John Surtees, who cracked up in Canada last September. Then he switched to veteran Walt Hansgen, who died of injuries suffered in a practice run spill at Le Mans. So Mecom settled for Hill, with the pencil-thin mustache, the hawk face, the veddy British accent. . . .

Rick Reichardt, the young California Angel slugger, is a memory bug—can remember, for instance, a short phone call made by me two years ago before we ever met. . . . "It's important," he says, "not to forget things." . . .

Ron Fairly, the Dodger redhead who has jacked up the Los Angeles offense, traces his renaissance as a hitter to his full-time switch to the outfield last year after splitting his first four seasons between the gardens and first base. "I have more time to concentrate in the outfield," he says, "to think a little bit how the pitcher was working on me that particular afternoon, whereas at first base I found myself concentrating on holding the runners and doing a few little things that possibly I wouldn't do in the outfield." . . .

RON FAIRLY

Probably the two fastest men in the American League are Jose Cardenal of the Angels and Bert Campaneris of the Athletics. They're second cousins. "Bert," admits Jose, "he beat me from home plate to first base. But he no run faster in 100 yards." . . .

Yogi Berra checks the bonuses and salaries paid kids now and shakes his head dolefully. He reviewed his salary scale as a Yankee and revealed it took him six years to work up to $35,000. And during that time he'd already become the most valuable player in the American League. "It doesn't take a kid as long now to get up there," he says, "because there are not as many guys behind him in the farm system. You shoulda seen all the catchers the Yankees had." . . .

Pretty soon it'll get so you can't talk to a baseball player without paying him. Shove a mike in front of the face of anyone on a team like the Cincinnati Reds and he wants $.. for the bother. . . .

Not a word has passed between the offices of the commissioners of the American and National football leagues since Al Davis became the head man in the AFL. And that's part of the trouble in the explosive pro football war. They're never going to reach agreement and prevent ridiculous double signings like the Roman Gabriel tussle between Oakland and Los Angeles until some kind of liaison is established. . . .

This is the last year of pole vaulting for Mel Hein Jr., who, dad, in both the college and pro halls of fame, discouraged him from college football at USC because he weighed only 165. . . .

Judge Roy Hofheinz always sounds like a walking commercial about his Astrodome (which is really Harris County Stadium). "More people, four and a half million," he spiels, "attended it the first year than any other stadium in history. It has creature comforts not afforded by any other stadium in the world." But can Houston support two pro football teams (the judge wants an AFL franchise to move in)? "Overwhelmingly!" . . .

Between you'n'me, outfielder Vada Pinson of the Reds is having a vendetta with the Cincinnati press. Tried to get them kicked out of the trainer's room, though skipper Don Heffner said it was O.K. to be there. . . .

Blames 'Moving Eyes' on Sun

EUREKA SPRINGS, Ark. (AP)—The co-ordinator of the Elna N. Smith Foundation set the record straight Wednesday on the "moving eyes" of the massive Christ of the Ozarks statue.

The co-ordinator, Charles F. Robertson, quoted the sculptor-artist on the project. Emmet Sullivan, as saying the apparent movement is caused by chaning light from the western sun.

Robertson said many visitors claimed they saw the eyes move. The statue will be dedicated June 25. It is seven stories high.

THE DOCTOR'S MAILBAG

Removal of Breast Deemed Safest Procedure

BY WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q—I had my left breast removed because of suspicious cells. The surgeon said there was no evidence of cancer. Of what disease am I a victim?

A—If the suspicious tissues of the removed breast were examined microscopically by a competent pathologist and no evidence of cancer was found you are a victim of a policy of better safe than sorry, but not of cancer.

Q—I am 14 and my breasts are very large. Is there anything I can do to reduce them?

A—Some people are never satisfied. An operation to remove some of the breast tissue could be done but is not advisable. Taking male hormones might prevent any further development of your breasts but they would probably also stiffen your beard. Better let well enough alone.

Q—I am 16. Last month I started to have a slight yellow discharge from my breasts. What would cause this and what should I do?

A — This may disappear spontaneously but if it persists for 2 or 3 months it may be an indication of a tumor of the pituitary. If this is the case, X-ray treatments directed at this gland provide the surest cure.

Q—I have a tennis elbow which hurts when I lift anything. How can I get rid of it?

A—This is a form of bursitis and judging by the letters I get there must be an epidemic of this disease. Moderate movement is necessary to prevent stiffening of the joint. Hot applications, diathermy or ultrasound treatments and a short course of cortisone should help you if the condition has not become chronic.

Q—Is it usual for a woman to develop a lot of pimples on her face during the menopause?

A—Acne in adolescents is caused by an increased activity of the oil glands of the skin. When the regular internal secretion of the sex hormones becomes established in the late teens or early 20s the acne usually clears up. Estrogens (female hormones) have long been used with some limitations in the treatment of persistent acne. Thus it would seem logical to expect an increase in acne when the ovaries no longer produce their own estrogens. This would occur, however, only in a woman whose skin was unusually oily. A carefully regulated maintenance dose of estrogens should help in such a case.

Please send your questions and comments to Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D., in care of this paper. While Dr. Brandstadt cannot answer individual letters he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

Food for Thought—

By TOM NOLAN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON—(N E A)—Congress is finding it tough these days to keep track of all the things on which President Johnson has declared "war."

Take the War on Hunger, which recently got all tangled up with the war in Viet Nam.

It all began when the House Agriculture Committee tacked an amendment onto the Food for Freedom Act (designed to replace PL 480 which expires Dec. 31). The amendment rules out as a recipient of food diplomacy any country engaged in trade with North Viet Nam.

"God knows we'd like to stop Free World trade with Ho Chi Minh," fumes one administration source. "If only it were that easy. The House seems to have lost sight of the forest for looking at the trees."

The State Department has been successful in persuading friendly countries to eliminate Haiphong as a port of call by quietly applying diplomatic pressure through appropriate channels.

Last year, some 21 Free World nations either sold or shipped goods to North Viet Nam. Less than half of them still do.

The basic purpose of the Food for Freedom Act, according to President Johnson is that the "United States lead the world in a war against hunger."

What the President envisions is that every "have" nation join together to provide the "have nots" with the necessary technological advice and tools to produce enough food on their own and—until then—with sufficient food to tide them over.

Population experts now estimate that one billion people—a third of the world's population—are slowly starving to death.

Humanitarian reasons aside, the United States cannot afford to let them do so, because a starving nation is not a market. But solving the problem, say administration officials, must be a joint venture governed by flexibility—and to them, the House amendment is noteworthy only for its rigidity.

"We're searching for ways to build bridges," says one. "We can't afford to make hungry people tools of American foreign policy."

"It's kind of like 'Animal Farm,'" says another. "We'll lead the world in helping out the hungry nations. Unless they're Communist . . . or unless they trade with the Communists . . . or unless . . .

"We should not limit our foreign aid to countries which agree with us 100 per cent down the line."

Several U.S. allies, including West Germany, are looking for ways to cut back on their own aid programs. A U S decision to eliminate food aid to countries trading with North Viet Nam, in the opinion of several administration sources, might be the excuse these countries have been searching for.

The basic issue in this case is what one high government official calls "the desire of Congress to enforce foreign policy as forcefully as possible." Sometimes, he notes, a forceful program in one area can cut the legs from under successful programs in a dozen other areas.

"For example," he explains, "we've been walking on eggs diplomatically between Pakistan and India, continuing aid to each. We don't have the ability—as Russia seems to have—of being able to pick one side over the other.

"Pakistan has regularly scheduled air service between Karachi and Peking. Suppose they open a stop at Hanoi. Under the House amendment, bang! They're our enemies.

"Or, take Liberia. It seems like we've been supporting them for 100 years. One Liberian ship stops at Haiphong, and we throw all those years out the window."

Adopting restrictive amendments in foreign aid measures is nothing new. PL 480 went into effect in 1954 with a provision that excluded any country which shipped goods to Cuba. But this restriction did not apply to food donations.

About a third of the present PL 480 commodities are given away free, generally in cases of emergency (like the Yugoslav earthquake). The other two thirds are sold for local currency or dollar credits.

Nor did the Cuban restriction apply—as would the current amendment to the Food for Freedom Act—to countries which sold goods but had them transported by a third country.

Detecting the original source of goods unloaded at Haiphong would be a difficult task at best. It's relatively easy, of course, to keep tabs on ships docking in North Viet Nam. But they might have loaded and unloaded at a dozen different ports earlier, and there are no "shipping attaches" in U.S. embassies.

"We'd probably rely on the CIA (Central Intelligence Agency)," says one official.

But to an administration already pushed into one dilemma by somebody else's desire to enforce foreign policy, this might not be the right answer.

HUNGRY HORDES — Population experts estimate that one-third of the people in the world are slowly starving. In India, for example, there are critical shortages of staples rice and wheat. Here, Calcutta citizens gather for the weekly rice dole.

LBJ Likes Backing for His Ideas

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, a great believer in being backed up by a broad consensus when he tries to put an idea across, lays the foundation today for a lot of future action on civil rights.

A two-day White House Conference on Civil Rights, about 2,400 people taking part at his suggestion, opens and, when it is over, will send him a bundle of recommendations.

In a speech a year ago Johnson said that trying to obtain justice for the Negro "will be a chief goal of my administration" for the years to come.

He said he would call a White House conference in the fall of 1965 — as a starter — to help the American Negro "fulfill the rights which after the long time of injustice he s finally about to secure."

He called the conference in the fall. Eight panels of civil rights workers, experts in various fields, and governmen toffi cials were asked by Johnson to come up with ideas for a big long-range action to bring the Negro into equal status in houseing, education, economic, and job security, and the administration of justice.

This conference will not be asked to vote on the proposals bus discussions and suggestions will be recorded and reflected in a report to be submitted to Johnson within a few weeks.

The chairman of the planning council — Ben W. Heineman Jr., a railroad executive — sees the conference as a jumping-off point for a full-scale involvement by society at every level, by private citizens as well as government officials.

He denied the goals are "pie in the sky" although acknowledging that all the measures recommended might cos t billions of dollars.

One idea emphasized by the council and already proposed to Congress by Johnson is running into tough opposition ther. This was the call for an unrestricted market in housing.

In the years ahead as Johnson tried to translate into action the ideas from the council and the conference he can claim, especially to a Congress where he is bound to encounter some opposition, that the ideas didn't just spring from his administration. It will be a big help to him.

This will hold true — since the council itself already has made recommendations — even if the militant civil rights groups conference should be badly disference.

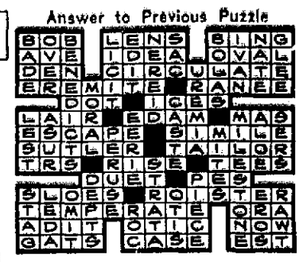

Tuesday the Congress of Racial Equality complained the it would take part to try to change the rules so tha t"the militant can bring forth ideas which otherwise would not be brought forth."

This was the word from CORE's National Director, Floyd B. McKissick. He wants the 2,400 delegates to vote on the council's recommendations, not just discuss them.

Another civil rights group, the Studdnt Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, decided to stay away.

Sauce for the goose is not always sauce for the gander. In a team match each East player opened the bidding with one club. West responded one spade. North doubled. East went to two clubs. South bid two diamonds and the bidding continued to five diamonds at one table and six diamonds at the other.

The three of clubs was opened against both contracts. The declarer at five diamonds ruffed, played dummy's ace and king of spades to discard two hearts and led a third spade. East ruffed with the ten. South overruffed and led a heart to dummy's ace. Then he ruffed a heart, ruffed a second club and led another spade. East ruffed with the jack and South discarded a club. East led another club. South ruffed with dummy's ace of trumps and eventually lost another trump trick but was home with his diamond game.

The declarer at six diamonds was not at all pleased with his prospects but he saw that his best chance for success was to establish dummy's heart suit.

Therefore he discarded a spade on the club. East was in with the king and returned a trump. South won in dummy, discarded two hearts on the ace and king of spades, played the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart in his own hand. Then he led a second trump to dummy and when both opponents followed he was able to ruff another heart to set up the last two hearts. Then he ruffed a second club in dummy and discarded his last two clubs on dummy's good hearts.

Six diamonds was certainly an optimistic contract but South had managed to bring it home. We aren't sure that he had adopted the best line of play and, strangely enough, the way the cards lay he could have made the slam in several ways.

Extremist Buddhist Leaders in Viet Nam Noticeably Stay Away From Gas Themselves

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — The extremist Buddhist leaders in Viet Nam stay awary from the gasoline can themelves. It's the minor, unheard-of Buddhists who are committing suicide by setting themselves afire.

There can be no doubt that the reported suicides in the past few days were committed with the approval of the leadership.

Unknown is this part of what happened: did these people volunteer to kill themselves or were they askd to?

These deaths, intended to force the overthrow of the military government led by Premier Nguyen Cao Ky, are aimed at world opinion but particularly at Amercian opinion. The United States has supported Ky's regime.

But such self-immolation by the Buddhists is based on a plea for pity — to see things the Buddhists' way and give them what they want — and not on an appeal to reason or what is right.

The hope is that the suicides will so horrify President Johnson and the American government — or so shame them before the world — that the United States will abandon Kv.

But it's a plea for pity mixed with blackmail — aggressive masochism — for Tam Chau, chairman of the Buddhist Institute, warned of more suicides unless Ky steps down an lets a civilian government take over.

Chau said "we will continue this struggle in the spirit of nonviolence of Buddhism." Asked if he considered sucide non-violence, he said: "I see no contradiction, no contradiction whatsoever."

Then he committed a perfect contradiction.

This struggle between the Buddhists and Ky's governmet is political ad not at all religious for Ky, a Buddhist himself, is not repressing or persecuting any religious group for relighous reasons.

But Chau said, "We Buddhists are not involved in a political struggle. We are defending our religion."

And Tri Quang, perhaps the most militant Buddhist leader, soid there might be more suicides unless Johnon dropped his support of Ky. He ralked after one of the burnings and, the New York Times reported, was "smiling impishly." He had written to Johnson for assistance.

But the administration brushed him off — this was two weeks ago — with a tatement by Secretary of State Rusk who said this government wanted all factions to loy aside their differences and pull together nationally.

After two suicides Saturday, a monk warned there would be more on Sunday and still more today.

In view of all this there can be no doubt that these suicides are not spontaneous acts by emotional individuals but are prearranged, with the blessing of the leaders who let the minor people die to further their cause.

This is one of the most cruel, cold-blooded performances in histors. It is extremism at its worst. Yet these same Buddhist leaders want a hand in runnin the government.

Reports from Viet Nam say these leaders do not represent the vast majority of Buddhists, who make up 80 per cent of the population, but only one faction.

A Report for Would-Be Businessmen

By DAVE BURGIN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

BOSTON, Mass.—(N E A)—A man in Baltimore who always wanted to go into business for himself decided, at last, to do so.

Where was the best opportunity? Where was the least risk? How did one begin?

With sound credit, and 800 hard-earned dollars in the bank, he began looking. Franchising, maybe.

Yes, franchising. It's a growing industry, he learned. Risk is low. Profit margins are inviting and challenging. Initial investment is comparatively small.

He was attracted by a classified ad. He contacted the party and, the same week, he bought "four vending machines, a territory and a 'license' to operate" for exactly $800.

Two months later he was out of business. Broke. Out of a job. And out $800.

Indeed everything the man heard about the potential of a franchise was true. The Better Business Bureau told him as much straightaway.

The problem was that the man had fallen prey to wheeler-dealers who had sold him, in effect, the Brooklyn Bridge. And four vending machines.

What's more, the wheeler-dealers had vanished. Even so, they were within the law. Not much, but enough.

But there was a bigger problem, the man learned. It was with the franchising industry itself. It has had such a rapid growth in the last decade that, until recently, it has not had time to police itself.

Last year, 25 per cent of all retail sales in the country were rung up by franchise firms. Franchising now accounts for 11 per cent of the Gross National Product. Twenty years ago it was but a fraction of that.

A franchise, basically, is a "license" to manufacture or distribute a product or service which is branded, patented, or exclusively controlled by a "parent" company. The franchisee pays a percentage, or fee, for the benefits he receives from the services provided by the franchisor.

Examples of such businesses are gas stations, highway restaurants and hamburger stands, motor inns or, in the cities, laundries and car dealerships. Industry growth in recent years is linked closely to the automobile and travel.

But so has there been a growth in complaints among franchisees about unscrupulous practices.

Industry leaders, lately aware of their industry's image, now are working with the Boston College of Business Administration to study ways of keeping corrupt practices from wiping out people intent on going into business for themselves.

And from Federal Trade Commissioner Mary Gardiner Jones has come the warning, "As franchisors, you must be able to exercise some control over your franchisees."

The Action Committee, formed to oversee work at Boston College, wants to set standards, through federal and state co-operation if need be, so that the unscrupulous are weeded out, and make abundant information that will keep the unsuspecting cautious.

Thus, there is also at Boston College a "Center for Franchise Distribution."

For would-be franchisees, the Center issues three main warnings:

- Make sure franchisors back up their claims in newspaper ads and sales pitches. See to it they have services and know-how.
- Like any good salesman, "know your territory."
- Look as hard at the negative as you do at the positive when you "bargain" for a franchise.

All France Eyes 'Miss Style Elle'

By TOM A. CULLEN
European Staff Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

PARIS—(NEA)—Tiny, blonde Helen Lazareff is said to be a fashion dictator, imposing her tastes upon the two million French women who read her magazine, Elle, each week.

That she has excellent taste no one questions. Madame Lazareff is the latest winner of the Neiman-Marcus Award, which is the Oscar of the fashion world. But Madame Lazareff's influence does not stop with clothes, according to her critics. She dictates attitudes towards everything from the make-up her readers wear to their choice of husbands.

Elle (she, in English) is not so much a magazine, as a way of life, her critics claim. There is something called Style Elle, which can be bought in Elle boutiques. There are Elle clubs which offer everything from packaged holidays to bridge lessons and Yoga exercises. There is even an Elle Encyclopedia.

From a 24-page magazine which Madame Lazareff founded shortly after the war, Elle has grown into a 300-page showcase for the good life in France, which in turn has created a million-dollar industry with all sorts of ramifications.

At the center of this is Madame Lazareff, whose charm belies any dictatorial ambitions she may have. Her brown eyes have laughing wrinkles, her dull blonde hair is cut gamine-style and she is totally disarming.

"I learned everything I know about the publishing business in America," she says, recalling the war years when she worked first for Harper's Bazaar, then for the New York Times. "Making up a daily woman's page, as I did for the New York Times, you learn a lot about psychology, presentation. My debt to America is enormous."

As she talks to visitors Madame Lazareff is constantly interrupted. First, the art editor wants an O.K. on a new layout, then the picture editor brings some fashion shots for her approval. Madame Lazareff keeps the reins of her magazine firmly in her hands.

"Elle is much more than a fashion magazine," Madame Lazareff claims. "We tackle all sorts of social issues that the average American woman's magazine would not touch with a barge pole."

Elle has taken up the family planning issue and is demanding the repeal of a 25-year-old law which makes birth control information illegal in France. As usual, Elle has taken up the issue in a big way, splashing it across five different issues of the magazine.

"We decided to tackle family planning because we kept getting letters from women readers who were going out of their minds with fear and anxiety," Madame Lazareff explains.

When Elle appears to be humdrum, its editoress tosses a bombshell into its columns to stir up controversy. For example, a recent article complained that the French were dirty, that they didn't take enough baths, but relied heavily upon eau de cologne. Elle's readers were highly indignant.

Madame Lazareff claims that there is such a thing as a typical reader, a Miss or Mrs. Style Elle, as it were.

"She is between 30 and 35 years old, not very tall, slim without being skinny," the woman editor declares. "She likes adventure in fashion, is ready to experiment with new colors and trends. She is well-read and interested in art."

A surprising thing about Miss Style Elle, considering that she is French, is that she is not a very good cook. The magazine has had to teach its readers even the most elementary things about cooking.

Another surprise is that married Elle readers consult their husbands about their choice of clothing.

"No American wife would do this," Madame Lazareff maintains. "But Frenchmen are very critical about what their wives wear. If his wife does not dress right a Frenchman's eyes are apt to wander elsewhere. It is one of the realities of life."

ELLE EDITOR—Madame Helen Lazareff, as editor of a woman's magazine in France, "dictates" everything from fashions to choice of husbands.

French Make Big Deals With China

By RODNEY ANGOVE

PARIS (AP) — Two nationalized French firms have made big business deals with the Soviet Union and Red China recently, but officials deny any political implications.

'Its strictly business," said a spokesman of the Foreign Ministry. "Politics had nothing to do with it."

A spokesman for the Ministry of Economic Affairs said the same thing.

The deal with the Soviet Union gives Renault, France's largest auto maker, a free hand in revitalizing and expanding Russia's Moskvich auto plant The one with Red China opens a Paris-Shanghai route for Air France and a Chinese airline.

Both agreements were announced less than three weeks before President Charles de Gaulle leaves on an official visit to the Soviet Union.

De Gaulle has been campaigning for years for more East-West contacts, economic as well as cultural, as a step toward easing tensions. There has been speculation in the French press that his visit to Moscow may provide the occasion to announce more such contacts.

Long before anyone ever heard of the Beatles, the policeman's frizzy hairdo was the thing for Fiji men. But it's going out of style with the youngest generation, which, like the little boy, prefers the cut short and simple.

Auto Insurance Reds Beaten 'Core' Nonsense

Arkansas automobile owners were jolted this week with the second drastic increase in automobile liability insurance rates in 13 months.

State Insurance Commissioner Harvey G. Combs authorized a 21.2% rate increase after documentary evidence from the companies that their payouts had exceeded premium income by several million dollars over a period of years. The current increase follows a 17.5% hike only a little more than a year ago.

There is sharp opposition from the public, and Governor Faubus got into the act yesterday with a statement that the new increase ought to be rescinded — although legal minds say he can't actually override Commissioner Combs' decision.

The public has brought down this disaster on its own head—too many accidents by drivers, too many lawsuits, and too many large and unwarranted judgments brought in by excited juries.

The first law of insurance is that you can't get out of it more money than you put into it in premiums. But that's what the people of Arkansas have been doing for a number of years—and payday is here.

Our dilemma is this:

Either we let the insurance companies have higher premiums so they can earn the profit guaranteed them by law, or the companies threaten to cancel all insurance and withdraw from our state — the classic situation that always develops when insurance underwriters find they are operating at a loss.

Juan Bosch may not be 100% Communist but at least he was the Reds' front man when president of the Dominician Republic and the prime cause for the public violence which compelled American armed intervention in that unhappy land.

Therefore we have cause for rejoicing in yesterday's report that Bosch in a come-back attempt was soundly defeated by his conservative opponent Joaquin Balaguer.

The people of Santo Domingo have spoken — and their words will echo all over Latin America.

The Congress of Racial Equality — CORE — got its ears properly knocked down yesterday when it had the gall to ask the White House Conference on Civil Rights to support its demand that the United States get out of Viet Nam and give priority instead to civil rights activity at home. The other civil righters told CORE "No."

It's the height of absurdity, of course, to put any domestic question ahead of national security — particularly when American boys are fighting and dying far from home.

It was an ignorant and presumptious and cowardly proposal — but sharper minds in the civil rights movement gave it a quick and just answer.

Volley Fired at Insurance Rate Hikes

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Orval Faubus fired off a volley of telegrams Thursday asking insurance companies to withdraw their request for a rate increase in automobile liability insurance.

Faubus, who earlier in the day demanded that the state Insurance Department rescind the 21.2 per cent rate increase that took effect Wednesday, said that if the companies agreed to withdraw the request it would eliminate the rate increase for the time being.

The governor also said it would do away with the need of a full public hearing on the latest increase. Faubus had called for such a hearing, and Insurance Commissioner Harvey Combs said he would approve of one.

Faubus said he sent the telegrams to the National Automobile Underwriters Association, the Travelers Indemnity Co.'s rate department, the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters and member companies.

The latest rate increase came on the heels of a 17.5 per cent increase made 13 months ago.

Gubenatorial candidates were moving in force against the controversial decision, some calling for an immediate public hearing on the matter.

Surveyor 1 Is Sending Back Many Photos

By RALPH DIGHTON
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Surveyor 1, triumphant U. S. spacecraft with feet planted firmly on the moon, radioed its second long stream of pictures early today — photos of itself and lunar terrain, containing no surprises.

Some of the second series were out of focus, hurriedly taken to sped the camera on a full-circle sweep of the landing site — the Sea of Storms near the moon's equator.

Others of the series were remarkably detailed, some showing items as small as one-eighth of an inch. Scientists, after studying results of the full-circle sweep, plan later to turn the camera back to snap interesting areas.

The 620-pound spacecraf tsettled gently on its three shock-absorbing legs early Thursday after a spectacularly successful 63-hour voyage over a quarter of a million miles.

Scientists said the accomplishment put the Surveyor program — an effort involving plans for a total of seven Surveyor shots at a cost of $725 million — ahead by one year.

Communist China Starts Political Purge

By EUGENLEVSN

TOKYO (AP) —Peng Chen, mayor of Peking and one of the Chinese Communist party's top members, was apparently stripped of his party post today as part of the current widespread purge of dissident elements.

Without mentioning the mayor's name, Peking radio in a Chinese-language broadcast announced the appointment of Li Hsueh-feng as first secretary of the party's Peking central committee. This was the post Peng Chen held before some of his close associates were accused fo "antiparty, antisocialist" activities.

Peng Chen has not been reported seen in public for more than two months, and there had been rumors that he was marked for the purge.

The purge apparently has entered a new phase, with the party leadership intensifying its crackdown and admitting the opposition is "still very powerful." Editorials in the official Peking People's Daily and other published statements this week show that the cleanup is not having smooth sailing.

Peng Chen, now 67, reportedly ranked ninth among Red China's leaders and once was regarded as a possible successor to Mao Tze-tung. He has not been openly accused, but there have been hints that he was involved with three men charged with wanting "to overthrow the leadership of the Chinese Communist party."

Dominican Vote Slaps at Leftists

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — An avalanche of votes from a people weary of revolutionary violence carried Joaquin Balaguer to victory in the Dominican presidential race Thursday night. Indications were that the little island nation could expect a tough crackdown on any extremist attempt to make trouble.

The vote, hailed as fair and clean by scores of official foreign observers, was a crushing setback for the moderate left and a stinging repudiation for pro-Communist and pro-Castro elements.

U.S. officials from President Johnson down were delighted that the election had been peacefu. There was also relief in Washington that the victor wax Balaguer, areform-minded conservative, rather than leftist Juan Bosch.

Work began right away to make the fake wall secure.

Gemini 9 in Orbit for Space Walk and Satellite Rendezvous

Everything Goes Well in 3rd Orbit Try

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) The Gemini 9 pilots, smashing a 17-day jinx, rocketed into orbit today and skillfully tracked a target satellite in a 17,500-mile-an-hour chase across the skies.

After two heartbreaking scrubs, a might Titan 2 rocket launched astronauts Thomas P. Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan on a vital three-day flight that could bring the U.S. its second space triumph of a busy week.

As the space ship settled into orbit, the pilots went in hot pursuit of a tiny, barrel-shaped satellite launched Wednesday hoping for a rendezvous with the target high over the Pacific Ocean early this afternoon.

After executing four major orbital changes with bursts of his jet thrusters, Stafford in the first 2½ hours of the flight closed the distance to the target from 640 to about 125 miles.

He also had shifted the Gemini 9 path into almost a perfect circle 170 miles from the earth. At launch, the ship had gone into an orbit ranging from 99 to 172 miles.

Until the astronnuts catch the target they won't know whether they'll be able to dock with it. For only then will they be able to solve the mystery of whether a protective covering has jettisoned from the docking collar.

The postponements, adding up to 17 days, placed the launching attempt on an important anniversary in U.S. space flight. One year ago today Edward H. White II became the first American to walk in,space as he stepped outside the Gemini 4 craft manned by James A. McDivitt.

Cernan plans to extend man's knowledge in his exciting and important field Saturday by taking a 2½-hour celestial stroll, propelling himself about with a rocket-powered back pack.

The space twins were to chase the satellite — called ATDA, for Augmented Target Docking Adapter — at 17,500 miles an hour over a 76,000-mile course, catching it four hours later high above the western Pacific Ocean.

When they are within eyesight of the barrel-shaped ATDA they will be able to determine whether the shroud is on or off. The order in which they exercise various assignments will depend on the shroud.

This element of suspense was added to the flight when ground stations Wednesday received an indication that the ATDA shroud did not eject as planned after the rocket pushed up through the heavy portion of the earth's atmosphere.

Officials weren't sure the 90-inch, 300-pound covering was still in place. Radar tracking devices of the North American Air Defense Command deecetd 11 pieces flying in formation in the general area of the ATDA and the Atlas rocket that pushed it into orbit.

Most of the pieces were believed to be debris from the Atlas, but officials were hopeful a couple of them might be the two halves of the shroud.

The shroud covers the docking collar into which the Gemini 9 nose was to be inserted during the docking. If the cover was still in place, the docking plan would have to be abandoned, but the target would still be useful for rendezvous practice.

The crowded flight plan for ee-day mission called for

The crowded flight plan for the the-day mission called for nine separate dockings with the ATDA — if the shroud was off, three diffdrent types of rendezvous with the satellite, and Cernan's space walk.
